Region 9 expansion passes in very low turnout

By ALISON ALOISIO

Region 9 voters Tuesday approved a $4.9 million expansion and renovation project for the vocational school.

Voter turnout was light in the vocational district's 16 towns. The vote total was 646-476, according to Norm Clanton, chairman of the Region 9 Board of Directors.

It was closer in SAD44, with the measure passing by 22 votes, 175-153, he said. SAD43 (Rumford/Mexico) voted 264-146, but SAD21 defeated the proposal, 159-156.

The 17,300-square-foot project will provide more space for existing programs, and the space to add two new ones, automotive technology and early childhood development.

Region 9 will receive $1.7 million in state grants and interest-free loans to help pay for the work.

"I feel very gratified," said Clanton, who is also SAD44's representative. "The light turnout was unfortunate, but I feel good that voters have given us the go-ahead, and feel it's a worthwhile investment in the future. To be able to move the project forward in tough financial times reflects that the school is doing good things."

New laws take effect

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Laws setting a minimum age to operate personal watercraft and additional curbs on mercury emissions are among the new state laws that took effect Jan. 1. Laws applying to child-care facilities and fuel dealers also kicked in New Year's Day in Maine.

The laws took effect just days before the newly seated Legislature returned to the State House to begin a new two-year session.

The watercraft bill won't have any practical effect until the weather warms up in the spring and boaters start hitting the lakes and rivers.

It bars 16- and 17-year-olds from operating personal watercraft, popularly known as Jet Skis, unless they're accompanied by someone at least 18 or they can show that they've completed a boater safety course. Youths under 16 may not operate them at all.

The law's sponsor, Rep. Thomas Watson, said the bill originally sought to require all recreational boaters to have some basic boater safety courses before operating watercraft.

But the idea of "licensing" recreational boaters ran into early resistance in the Inland Fisheries and Wildlife Committee, so the bill was amended, said Watson, D-Bath. He noted the amended bill had the strong support of the per-

FAR FROM THE HOT SANDS OF IRAQ

Army veteran Juan Arredondo, who lost an arm to an IED in Iraq, was among five "Wounded Warriors" who went on an overnight dogsledding trip in Grafton with the Mahoosuc Guide Service. The soldiers, who undergo rehabilitation at the Brooke Army Medical Center in Texas, take part in a variety of sports to help with their rehabilitation and recovery.

Wounded warriors enjoy a little R&R here

By ALISON ALOISIO

Polly Mahoney and Kevin Slater of the Mahoosuc Guide Service are accustomed to introducing people to "roughing it" in a wilderness experience.

But when they hosted five people last week from the Wounded Warrior Project, the guides found that their clients instead reveled in the service's "luxury" accommodations.

The project is aimed at helping the men and women of the armed forces who have been severely injured in the war on terrorism, according to the organization's website. Most of the wounded served in Iraq or Afghanistan.

In addition to providing support and counseling for the veterans while they are still in the hospital, the organization also offers rehabilitation and recovery through adaptive sports and recreation programs.

That's where Mahoosuc comes in. Brian Neuman, a benefits liaison for WWP, found the guide service on the Web, said Mahoney, and arranged a weekend dogsledding trip for five veterans, including himself and his wife.

"They wanted to check us out for possibly sending more groups in the future," she said.

The Iraq veterans, most missing a limb, came to Maine from the Texas hospital where they have been rehabilitating.

Mahoney and Slater took them on an overnight dogsled trip in the Grafton Notch region. The guides took four dog teams, and the veterans learned how to mush.

"They loved it," said Mahoney.

And, she said, the group was a treat to work with.

"They're all so well-trained to follow directions. And their sense of direction is great—they're trained to know where they are all the time."

And, she said, "it was luxury camping compared to what they were used to."

Mahoney said the group members talked freely about how they were wounded.

"They talked about how it changed their lives. Some of them were injured in situations where others were killed," she said, and some said that because they survived, they felt a responsibility to help other veterans through the program.

Mahoney said most of the group members were in their 30s. The youngest was Juan Arredondo, 26, who is originally from California. He joined the Army when he was 17.

Arredondo lost an arm in an improvised explosive device (IED) attack in Iraq.

Learning to adapt Neuman, contacted Tuesday, said his group's time in

Bethel sailor recalls adventure off Siberia's frozen coast

By MICHAEL DANIELS

It was a terse, unnerving conversation.

"What are your intentions?" radioed Odd Lyngholm to the large Russian trawler rapidly bearing down on Lyngholm's 43 foot sailboat.

Only ominous silence.

Under nautical rules of the road, a sailboat has right of way in encounters with motor vessels, but after a long career at sea Lyngholm knew better than to bet his bottom on rules of the road.

"Russians don't care much about right of way," he said. "Russian captains run down sailboats all over the world. They're known for doing that."

So Lyngholm did the prudent thing — he changed course.

But so did the trawler, and now it was rapidly closing on the sailboat.

"Finally I got on the horn again and asked again: 'What's your intentions?'" Lyngholm said. "And this time a reply came — in reasonably good English — 'Are you the spy boat?'"

Sailors or spies?

The encounter took place in near the end of July 2000, in a narrow strait off the coast of Siberia.

'We had sailed through some of the most fortified areas in the world, with some of the biggest radars. ... It was a big embarrassment to them. And then I was an American, and that wasn't too good.'

ODD LYNGHOLM

Lyngholm and his single crew member, a Maltese ship captain, were on their way back to Norway after a thwarted attempt to realize a long-time dream of Lyngholm's.

Sailing a two-masted schooner, the Haagard, he designed and build specifically for the purpose, Lyngholm was attempting to become the first person to sail a small boat through the Northeast Passage in a single season.

"The Northeast Passage is the opening that happens and sometimes doesn't happen between Siberia and the North Pole," Lyngholm said. "It's a two and one half thousand mile passage that goes from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

In the past, the passage was normally open for only two or three weeks, he said, but with global warming its open season has been growing longer.

He and the Maltese captain, Joe Gabrielle, began their voyage in June, sailing from Lyngholm's hometown of Haugesund, Norway.

Their long journey to the east began with a short leg to the west, to pick up one nautical essential that's quite costly in Scandinavian countries.

"We sailed to the the Shetland Islands to to stock up on tax-free liquor," Lyngholm said.

From there they sailed northeast around the northern cape of Norway then east for 800 miles through the Barents Sea, to the 24-mile-wide strait between Russia's Novaya Semiya island and the Siberian coast.

From living on the edge to 'live edge' furniture

By ALISON ALOISIO

Odd Lyngholm, 70, was trained in Europe as a marine engineer, and later worked in plasma physics in California.

Most of his career was spent in the merchant marine, he said, but starting in the mid-seventies he had several shore gigs (including at Sunday River) in western Maine.

Throughout his working life, he also took plenty of time off for "sailing sabbaticals." (see story above).

Now in semi-retirement, he lives with his wife, Sara, in West Bethel, and he has turned his talented hands to wood.

He started by building his own home.

Lyngholm came up with the house design while sailing. The emphasis in his do-it-yourself project was on pine wood — for the floors, the walls, the cathedral ceiling, and the second-floor walkway.

"It was the first time I had worked in wood," he said.

'A TRIP UP EVEREST'

To the Editor:
The Mahoosuc Land Trust will present the second of its local Knowledge Series programs in Trustee's Auditorium, McLaughlin Science Center on the Gould Academy campus in Bethel on Wednesday, Jan. 17 at 7 p.m. The speaker will be Bill Yeo, formerly of Bethel, who will take us on "A Trip Up Everest."
Yeo has organized, planned, and led dozens of expeditions over the last 20 years to some of the most remote and wild locations on earth. Places such as the Amazon River, Andes Mountains, Arctic Circle, and Africa are common subjects at his Durham, Maine, dinner table. Alternating between climbing some of the tallest mountains in the world, he enjoys third world cycling expeditions and Arctic ski traverses.
Recently Yeo returned from an attempt to climb the North Ridge of Mount Everest with stunning images and video. He will share with us that adventurous assault which he documented with his trusty Leica cameras.
The Mahoosuc Land Trust is pleased to offer this series to the public free of charge. We invite you to join us for what promises to be an exciting evening on Jan. 17 at 7 p.m.

COLD WAR VICTORY DAY

To the Editor:
As the Maine State Director of the Cold War Veterans Association, it gives me great pleasure to announce that on Dec. 7, 2006, Governor Baldacci signed a proclamation declaring May 1, 2007, as Cold War Victory Day in Maine, making our great state the first state in the nation to provide this honor to our servicemen and servicewomen who served with honor during the period of September 1945 to December 1991.
As a way to pay homage and honor to our fallen comrades and those who served during this period of the "Cold War," we are attempting to make May 1 a nationally recognized day and also to ask Congress to authorize, and the Department of Defense to issue, a medal for all those who served honorably and with grace and dignity. Many lost their lives in the pursuit of our freedom and have not received the just recognition so deserved, but as yet not extended.
If you visit our website: www.coldwarveterans.com/index.html, you will see our mission and our goals. We ask that you contact your elected officials and ask them to back, and vote for, the new bills as they are introduced into the new legislative sessions this year.

REMEMBERING PRESIDENT FORD

To the Editor:
The recent passing of former President Gerald Ford brought back a flood of memories of a chief executive who put a human face on an "imperial presidency." He was such a contrast to his predecessor, who was predominantly a secretive and remote figure. Here was a president who declared himself "a Ford not a Lincoln."
The first image we had of him the day after he became president was making his own toast while in his pajamas. Initially, I was not very confident of what kind of president he would be since his record in Congress was predictably ultra-conservative. I realized that he represented a very conservative district in Michigan, so it was likely to assume that he would not be particularly inspiring. Once he took charge of the whole nation, however, and moved to the center (although he appropriately never gave up being a hawk on spending and curbing government waste), I found much to admire about his presidency. His pardon of Nixon troubled me at the time, but I knew he was right, that it had to be done if the country was to focus on the future. His choice of former New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller as vice president also encouraged me. Throughout the 1960s I had been a supporter of his candidacy for president, although in high school I had been a backer of Nixon in 1960 and liked (and still do) Goldwater's ideas on individual liberty.
This all provides some background on why I and others worked so hard to make sure Ford was elected in 1976. It all began here in Bethel when we had to make sure that he received the Republican nomination. Former governor Ronald Reagan challenged Ford in the Republican primaries. I hated to see him run against Ford since I thought the president deserved re-election. Therefore, we had to ensure we had Ford delegates from Bethel to the State Convention in 1976. We succeeded in having all our Bethel delegates in the Ford camp with alternates supporting Reagan. At the convention, we had to be certain our Ford delegates were present for the vote for delegates to the National Convention. It was an exciting time, but we did manage to prevail and do our bit to help him get the nomination. I was disappointed when Ford dropped Rockefeller for vice president, but understood the growing influence of the south and west in the Republican party made Rockefeller seem a liability as he faced Reagan's challenge. If he had kept Rockefeller, he might not have been nominated, but if he had gotten past that challenge, I believe he would have won the general election. Although he became one of the great Majority Leaders of the U.S. Senate, Robert Dole was not a good choice for second place on the Republican ticket. Reagan would have been possibly the ideal selection to unify the party, but he refused to accept the vice presidential nomination. Despite low poll numbers at the beginning of the election, Ford did a yeoman job of campaigning and very nearly prevailed. I was sorry to see him go, but retained great regard for him all his remaining days. His wife, Betty, was a courageous partner in his presidency and did much to advance various progressive causes during and after his presidency.
I once met President Ford, in 1975 at a political gathering in Portland, and managed to get his autograph on the back of my ticket to the event. It has always been one of my choice possessions, and now that he has died its significance has grown and will remain great for the rest of my days as I continue to admire our 38th President as a man of courage and wisdom.

A CARING MOTHER

To the Editor:
A few months ago, I went to a hearing at the Rumford Court House. It was about a long-time friend of mine getting visitation rights to see her son. The guardian ad litem made this statement to the courtroom, "You don't know [this woman] ...," to the effect that if we did know her, we would not be there in her defense. As a life-long neighbor and friend, I was upset at this comment but, at the time, let it go. Now, due to new developments in this case, I find it is time to speak up.
Excuse me, Mr. Guardian Ad Litem, I think I know her much better than you do. I have been a neighbor and friend of the family for over 40 years. I watched her grow up and grew up with her. I have always found her to be a very kind, caring, warm, friendly and honest person. She was a happy-go-lucky girl who always had a smile to share, and was willing to help anybody out when she could. How is it that this mother has less right to see her child than proven criminals who are in prisons? Prisoners don't have to pay hefty mediator fees, yet they have the right to see and visit with their children. Maybe it's time a few more people stood up and took a stand for what is right; my belief is if we don't stand up for what we believe to be right, then we will fall for anything.
I believe that something is very wrong with our judicial system when criminals have more rights than a caring mother who loves her son.

Maine was "an awesome learning experience. We learned so much from Kevin and Polly."
Originally from Rhode Island, Neuman was a staff sergeant and paratrooper in the Army until he lost his arm in an attack in Iraq in 2004.
He said he could have stayed in the Army after he recovered, but could not have functioned in the way he wanted.
So, he said, "I decided to use it as a positive experience and what I could to help other soldiers."
He works out of the Brooke Army Medical Center in Texas, where the soldiers undergo rehabilitation.
Neuman said that dogsledding and other activities, such as skiing, rafting, and ice climbing, "give the soldiers something else to focus on, and teach them how to adapt to new things," he said.
The youngest wounded soldiers generally have the most difficult time adjusting to severe injuries, he said.
As for his own experience here, Neuman said he was worried at first about dogsledding, but after giving it a try felt quite competent.

Neuman said he particularly found the camping equipment—including a wood stove—a luxury, because he had served in cold-climate Afghanistan.
Mahoney said she hopes to see more of the wounded warriors in the future, when warmer weather arrives.
"They want to come canoeing this summer," she said.

the plan, worrying that the cost could ultimately result in cuts to the local school budget.
On the SAD44 margin of victory, Clanton said, "I recognize it will have an impact on the budget, and that's a tough thing to deal with. It was by no means a landslide, but at least we carried it here."
Among SAD44 member and tuition towns, the measure passed in Bethel (104-67); Newry (22-21); and Upton (11-2).
It was defeated in Andover (21-15); Greenwood (17-15); Gilead (14-8); and Woodstock (27-19).
Clanton said SAD21 will likely feel the greatest tax impact from the project.

He said construction will get underway this summer, with completion scheduled for the fall of 2008.
"We plan to wring everything we can out of every tax dollar," he said.
The architect for the project is Jim Reuter of Smith Reuter and Lull.

Laws

seek to bring Maine closer to removing the hazardous heavy metal entirely from the environment, said the sponsor, former Sen. Scott Cowger. Maine has already banned sales of products that contain mercury and set up programs to recycle mercury switches.
The latest law, submitted by Gov. John Baldacci, applies to the handful of trash-to-energy plants whose emissions include mercury.
It reduces the mercury emission limit from 50 pounds a year to 35 pounds per year. The standard will be further reduced to 25 pounds in 2010. The law puts Maine among the states leading the nation in controlling mercury air emissions, said Cowger.
A law that changes the inspection regulations for childcare facilities and nursery schools is designed to add flexibility for state license inspectors, who sometimes are overwhelmed by backlogs of mandatory annual inspections, said the sponsor, Rep. Brian Duprey, R-Hampden.
Under the new law, licenses will be issued for two years instead of one. Department of Health and Human Services inspectors will continue to make an annual visit, but during the second year will make an unannounced visit.
Duprey, who owns six daycare centers, said not knowing when an inspector will arrive for the second visit will force the owners to make sure their facilities are always in top order.
"For them to come in without us knowing they're coming in," he said, "it's probably the best thing they can do."
Besides giving inspectors more flexibility, the new law cuts administrative costs, Duprey added. The law also sets a two-year license fee of $160 rather than separate one-year fees, but the total amount operators must pay remains the same.
Another law requires all aboveground motor-fuel storage tanks that have underground piping to be registered with the state Department of Environmental Protection as of Jan. 1. Those facilities are required to submit inspection results annually, beginning July 1. The law does not apply to tanks that hold diesel fuel until July 2009.

The law makes regulations applying to underground tanks parallel with aboveground tanks.
The new year brought some changes to Maine's tax laws. A tax deduction for contributions to qualified tuition investment plans took effect. Income tax forms will have a checkoff for the new Maine Asthma and Lung Disease Research Fund.
A sales and use tax reimbursement program for equipment used for telecommunications infrastructure in "Connect Maine" zones where wireless and broadband access is lacking has also taken effect.
The laws that took effect on the first day of 2007 were enacted by the previous Legislature, but most of the bills they passed took effect last Aug. 23, which marked the 90th day after the 2006 session's close.

Young steps down; Jodrey chief

BETHEL—Asst. Chief Mike Jodrey has assumed the position of fire chief in Bethel after Jim Young stepped down last week. Young, who served as chief for 17 years, did not give a reason for his resignation. He said he will now serve as assistant chief and continue to do the paperwork associated with the chief's job until at least June, when department elections will take place. Young will also continue to serve in the position of fire warden. (See Letter to the Editor, page 2.)

Family suffers third house fire

WOODSTOCK—The home of Roy and Linda Buck sustained heavy smoke and fire damage in a Friday blaze. It was the third fire experienced by the couple in the past two years. The fire started in the basement, according to Fire Chief Jeff Inman. The fire is under investigation. The Bucks had lost another home on the same site in 2004, and then were burned out of a rental mobile home in Bethel in early 2005. The house that burned Friday was a new home built after the first fire.

Misuse of 911 on the rise

PARIS—Jim Miclon, director of the Oxford County Regional Communications Center, said there has been an increase in the misuse of the county's 911 emergency phone lines. "I have monitored many 911 calls and have heard people calling the center for everything from weather reports to 'where's the fire,'" he said. "That is not what 911 is designed for." Callers should use 211 for Health and Human Services questions, 411 for directory assistance, and 511 for traffic information, he said. "You should only call 911 for true emergencies, where fire, rescue, and police are needed immediately," said Miclon. The OCRCC answers 911 calls for all of the county, and with a limited number of lines and dispatchers handling 50 emergency agencies, "Those non-emergency calls coming in on the 911 lines could cause a problem if a true emergency should come in," he said. Steps in using 911: 1) Dial the numbers from a safe place; 2) Wait for a call taker to answer; 3) State the emergency; 4) The call taker will confirm your name, address and phone number; 5) Remain calm, speak clearly and follow any instructions; 6) Stay on the line until the call taker says to hang up.

Crash still under investigation

NEWRY—Answers are still months away in a plane crash that claimed the lives of a pilot and three Lewiston High School students last summer. The National Transportation Safety Board is continuing to track leads and look into factors that may have played a role in the crash of the Cessna 172 on June 22, said Todd Gunther, an NTSB investigator. It could be another five months before final conclusions are released, he said. Killed in the crash were Nicholas Babcock, 17, Teisha Loesberg, 16, and Shannon Fortier, 15, of Lewiston, along with the pilot, William "Charlie" Weir, 24, of Auburn. A preliminary report indicated the plane was operating at full throttle when it crashed into the tops of 60-foot trees on Barker Mountain near the Sunday River ski area; the plane tumbled to the ground and the wreckage caught fire. Weir was a flight instructor who worked for Twin Cities Air Service. He was giving an introductory flying lesson to three teens as part of an Air Force Junior ROTC summer camp program when the plane crashed. Lt. Col. Robert Meyer, director of the Junior ROTC at Lewiston High, said flying has been suspended until the NTSB investigation is complete. Depending on the investigation's outcome, policy changes may be made to the Junior ROTC program nationwide, Meyer said. "Headquarters had e-mailed they were going to review the whole program," he told the Sun Journal newspaper.

Adventure

this put them for the first time in Russian water.

Lyngholm radioed to inform Russian authorities that they were passing through, but their radio message went unanswered, and they sailed on.

Perilous passage
"For the next thousand miles we sailed through ice, a lot of floating ice," Lyngholm said. "We had the midnight sun of course, but also fog all the time."

And rough seas.
At one point the Haagaard was thrown up twice onto the shelf of a long, tilted iceberg.

"The boat actually fell down on the iceberg sideways, with the mast spreaders chopping the ice," Lyngholm said.

"Then it fell off the ice and into the water again."

Then the same thing happened again.

Both times the boat landed back in the water "Upright, luckily," Lyngholm said, crediting the Haagaard's three-and-a-half ton keel.

Still, the ice kept coming.

"There were chunks as big as a house all around us," Lyngholm said. "Some smaller ones were hitting the boat. It was pandemonium actually."

They pressed on, only to have the Russian Coast Guard pull alongside and order them into the bleak Siberian supply port — and former Gulag camp — of Dikson.

The Russians were not pleased that the Haagaard had made it so far into the passage undetected, Lyngholm said.

"They treated us very well," he said, but they still wanted questions answered.

"We had sailed through some of the most fortified areas in the world, with some of the biggest radars," Lyngholm said. "It was a big embarrassment to them, and then I was an American, and that wasn't too good."

(Lyngholm became a U.S. citizen in the late 1960s.)
Lyngholm, Gabrielle and the Haagaard were kept under round-the-clock armed guard in Dikson, and the two men were repeatedly interrogated, including by officials of the KGB and GRU (Russian military intelligence).

They were also "evaluated" by a former Soviet admiral who, following the breakup of the USSR, was serving as captain of a large nuclear icebreaker, the Russia, operating in the area.

"He was a very nice person," Lyngholm said. "We all became very friendly. They realized I wasn't a spy, I wasn't all these things."

Eventually the captain offered to let Lyngholm join a line of ships that was to follow the Russia through the nearby Laptev Strait, a shortcut that would cut hundreds of miles off the trip to the Bering Sea.

THE GOOD SHIP HAAGAARD

But higher authorities had other ideas.

As Lyngholm was preparing to set off ahead for the strait, in order to be there when the speedier icebreaker arrived, he received a satellite telephone call from the captain.

"He said: 'I'm sorry, Odd. I can't let you through. I just got a message from highest hold' — he used those words 'highest hold' — in Moscow not to let you through."

No explanation was given for the decision, and neither the American ambassador in Moscow nor the Norwegian counsel in Murmansk were able to convince the Russians to change their minds.

"Everyone wondered why," Lyngholm said. "Was it bad sportsmanship, or bad politics? What was it?"

Lyngholm and Gabrielle were then ordered to go back the way they had come, and it was as they again traversed the narrow Novaya Semiya strait that the Russian trawler appeared.

There is no way of knowing if the Haagaard was in fact the putative "spy boat" the voice on the trawler referred to, but when Lyngholm replied: "No,

I am not the spy boat. I am the good ship Haagaard," the trawler changed course and sailed away.

The rest of the return journey was uneventful, but by chance Lyngholm was granted at least the satisfaction of letting the world know how he felt about his treatment at the hands of Russian authorities.

One day as the Haagaard was sailing home, Lyngholm was listening to the BBC's "TalkPoint" on the shortwave and he learned that a Russian minister was soon to be on the show to take questions.

Lyngholm grabbed the opportunity.

"I take my satellite phone. I call up BBC and I say 'I'm just coming out of Russia. I'm raving mad at the Russians, because they threw me out.'"

The "TalkPoint" staff arranged to have him put through, Lyngholm said. "And I fired loose at this poor Russian minister: Why in the world would you do this? Here I am, just a regular person trying to do something I planned for years. ... I was pretty tough with him, but all he could say was: 'I don't know.' 'I don't know.'"

The minister professed ignorance of the whole affair.

Other adventures followed for Lyngholm aboard the Haagaard, including surviving a hurricane off the coast of Ireland, but in 2004 he sold the boat to a Norwegian boat-builder.

"He just had to have it," Lyngholm said with a laugh, from his West Bethel home.

"I didn't like to see it go, but I knew if I kept it, I could never be back here," Lyngholm said. "It was a matter of practicality. I wanted to retire on land. And I wanted to retire in Bethel."

To Greenland stations
Lyngholm does, however, have at least one more journey planned.

"I have a friend up in Newfoundland who has a couple of boats, and I do plan to go up and take a trip to Greenland this coming summer."

"It's not that far, only three or four days or so, and we'd like to take a look at some of the old Nordic settlements."

Live edge

worked in wood," he said.

When the large home was substantially complete, Lyngholm looked at what he had accomplished, and what he had yet to do.

"I needed furniture," he said.

So he looked around the seven-acre wooded lot on which he had constructed his home. He found pine tree trunks and small trees that could not be used for lumber, and started making his own primitive-style benches, chairs, bar stools, bars and tables.

"It was mostly trial and error," he said, "but not too many errors."

The style, known as "live edge," incorporated the outside "edge" of the trees into the design. The pieces were held together with wood pegs.

During the same period, Lyngholm met and married his wife, Sara. When they invited people over to visit, and the visitors saw the furniture, said Sara, "This is amazing. You need to sell it."

So about two years ago, they started putting pieces up for sale at local craft fairs and through a web site.

"I make them and [Sara] sells them," said Odd.

The business, known as Haagaard's Den, has been a success. Odd said he has so far sold several dozen furniture items, some of them custom made.

With Sara's help, he continues to get much of the wood he uses from his own lot.

"We go out and find things and drag them home," said Sara. "And we have a friend with a mill."

Keeping it natural
Odd puts a lot of emphasis on preserving the character of each piece of pine.

"I take a piece of wood and look at it, and see what it might be," he said.

He even leaves traces of blue fungus and wormholes to help tell the story of the tree.

For some of the furniture legs, Odd uses the trunks of small trees that were damaged in the ice storm of 1998.

He doesn't put a fine, smooth finish on the wood. His tool marks are left slightly visible to give the furniture more texture. And, he said, "I don't use much lacquer."

Because the design of each piece is driven by the original tree, no two benches, tables or other items are alike.

Odd said he has found only one other crafter—in Australia—who makes live edge furniture that in any way resembles his.

The weather is just unbelievable for January in Maine!

We went to Gorham, N.H., this past weekend and decided to ride down the North Road on our way home. We saw several people out walking and enjoying the beautiful day. When we drove past Len Whiting's house, I almost expected to see him out mowing that green grass in front of his house.

I got a call from Bev Coriveau last Sunday. She wanted to share that she and Fernand were guests of a 45th wedding anniversary on Saturday. The family got together and really did surprise them. Fernand was even out working when everyone gathered and he had to be called to come home to celebrate. Congratulations on being married for 45 years.

My brother, Steve McLain, sent an article to me that appeared in a newspaper in Kennebunkport. Lewis and Earlene Clough, who used to own the little place next to him, had an article written about their twin grandsons. Justin and Nathaniel Clough joined the Marines together and are serving in Iraq. Justin was wounded but appears to be doing well and was taken to a hospital in Germany and then on to Bethesda, Md. The article states that, "the ammunition that went through Justin's body had ricocheted off a brass belt buckle of a fellow Marine, who retrieved it."

On Dec. 22, 2006, my nephew, Captain Stephen McLain III of the U.S. Army, was inducted into the Honorable Order of Saint Barbara, which recognizes professionalism and distinguished service in the Field Artillery of the United States Military. Nominations to the Order are reviewed annually by the Chief of the Field Artillery at Fort Sill, Okla. Captain McLain has served honorably in the United States Army Field Artillery for fifteen years. Stephen is the son of Steve and Lise McLain of Gilead. Congratulations to Stephen for a job well done.

Business meeting is Jan. 16. Please have reports by Jan. 11.

The Woodstock Extension will hold a meeting at the town annex on Wednesday, Jan. 17 at 1 p.m. Program is potato beads and tasting party.

The Woodstock-Greenwood Senior Citizens met on Thursday, Jan. 4, at the town annex with eighteen present. A delicious potluck dinner was held. Program for the year was discussed. Next meeting will be at the town annex with a potluck dinner. Program to be announced later.

Andy and Marlene Stowell, Alta Loma, Calif., were weekend guests of Brian and Linda Stowell before Christmas. While they were in town, Sue and Keith Bartlett of Bethel, Sara Carson of Oxford, and Rebecca Lloyd of Rumford, all stopped in for a visit. Sarah Stowell of Portland arrived Saturday evening and stayed through Christmas evening. On Christmas Day, Susan and Bruce Glines of West Paris, and Tim, Rachel and Benjamin Adams, Fayette, joined Linda, Brian and Sarah for Christmas dinner and gift giving.

Historical Society

The Woodstock Historical Society preserves our heritage perfectly as we move forward in the 21st century and the new millennium.

Larry Billings says his New England Cultural Center is now complete, as he got a book on Leonardo DaVinci by Sir Kenneth Clark.

Paul and Vicki Billings went to New Year's Bethel.

Waterford

by Rockie Graham

It is 2007 and the strange winter weather continues. Over the weekend we had summer and spring—Saturday it was up to 66 degrees at the Transfer Station; Sunday it went as high as 40. Even that is warm for January. In any case, Monday we had snow, sleet and rain. We started with snow; Waterford had about three inches and Albany had more like four or five. Then it turned to sleet and then rain.

We went out during the snow period to Dan Van Avery's so he could check out the compactor, and the roads were bad but not too bad. Then we went to the T.O. for a meeting. When we left there at 10 a.m., the roads were so bad that we were all over the road in 4-wheel drive. We decided to cancel the appointments later that morning. Even David realized that the roads were bad enough that we didn't really need to go anywhere. Later the weather turned to all rain and things got better. David was happy because he got to use the plow truck and plow the driveways and part of the road.

Hopefully by the time you read this, Dan will have repaired the compactor. It may already be repaired, we will find out this a.m. (Tuesday). The metal on the ram broke in half and had to be replaced and welded. That is why I keep trying to get people not to put things in the compactor that shouldn't be there. Metal, wood and other hard objects do not belong there and this is why.

David and I were planning on taking an exercise class. Friday we begged off because we got home late and Monday it was cancelled because of weather. Maybe we'll make it on Friday. In the meantime, we huff and puff but we do okay.

Thursday David and I went to the Governor's Inaugural Ball. It was great fun. We saw most of our legislators and some of our neighbors, most notable Joanne Morse of Waterford. It was a long trip home at night, but yesterday

Les Gammon gave me a pair of night-vision goggles and we shall see if they help me to drive at night. That way David won't have to be the driver and won't have to complain as much.

Next Monday, Jan 15, is the next selectmen's meeting. It begins at 6:30 p.m. They will definitely be discussing warrant items for the March Town Meeting. I know some warrant items will be introduced. This might be an important meeting to attend.

That is all for this week. Hope all had a happy New Year. Watch out for the ice.

From Gould Academy

Parents and friends of Gould Academy are welcome to join several Gould Academy "free" events which celebrate the life of Martin Luther King, Jr. The events will be held in Bingham Auditorium.

Sunday, Jan. 14 at 7:45 p.m. there will be a viewing of the movie: "The Children's March." This forty-minute film documents how the black children of Birmingham, Ala., felt oppressed at every turn, and in the spring of 1963 played a vital role in restoring humanity to themselves and to a race-divided America.

Monday, Jan. 15, 9:30 a.m.: "Seeds Of Peace" program with speakers, a video, then student Q & A, will be in the morning of our holiday celebration. There will be seating available for the public upstairs in Bingham Auditorium for the "Seeds of Peace" program. "Seeds of Peace" offers summer camps in Maine to bring together international teenagers from conflict regions of the globe through deep process sessions. There is also a domestic program called "Maine Seeds" to address and empower students to come to terms with racial and ethnic tensions between the diverse communities that have settled in the camp's home state of Maine.

(Downstairs seating is available for handicapped access only. Other guests are invited to sit upstairs, as this is a class day activity for Gould students.)

Art Exhibition

An art exhibition featuring the high-fire porcelain work of ceramic artists Angus Graham and Andrew Chania opens at the Owen Art Gallery on the Gould Academy campus on Friday, Jan. 12. An opening reception will be held from 7 to 9 p.m., and the event is open to the public.

Both artists are utilitarian potters working in high-fire porcelain. Their work is fired in a gas reduction kiln for two days or a wood-fired Anagama kiln for seven days. When not working on their own pottery, Graham and Chania work at Gustin Ceramics in South Dartmouth, Mass., where they fire kilns, make tile, and help run Gustin's professional studio. Prior to their employment at Gustin Ceramics, the artists earned their BFA concentration in ceramics from Alfred University, graduating in 2005 and 2006 respectively.

Angus Graham is a former Bethel resident and a 2001 graduate of Gould Academy, where his interest in ceramics blossomed under the tutelage of Gould ceramics teacher Woody Hughes '75, who also attended Alfred University.

The show will run from Friday, Jan. 12 through Monday, March 5.

The Owen Art Gallery is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, and by appointment on weekends. Admission is free. For more information call 824-7741.

From Oxford County Democrats

The historic Hotel Harris was overflowing with more than 150 supporters and well-wishers who braved the inclement weather and gathered on New Year's Day to witness the swearing-in of Sheriff Wayne J. Gallant and County Treasurer Mary Ann Prue, both of Rumford, and the formal appointment of Dane Tripp as Chief Deputy.

Dedimus Justice Laura Nokes of the Paris District Court conducted the formal swearing-in ceremony. Rep. John Patrick of Rumford served as Master of Ceremonies.

Patrick commented on the significance of the election of the first Oxford County Sheriff from Rumford, and on the exceptional campaigns waged by both Gallant and Prue to achieve their victories. He commented that the swearing-in ceremony and reception was the first such event for the county officials sponsored by the Democrats and will hopefully become a tradition.

Sheriff Gallant recognized the many law enforcement and public safety professionals in attendance, both active and retired, and Patrick did the same for legislative and municipal officials in attendance, as well as reading a congratulatory letter from Sen. Bruce Bryant who was unable to attend due to his schedule in the mill.

Chief Deputy Tripp was presented with his badge by Gallant who asked that Tripp's wife and son do the pinning honors.

Prue spoke briefly, thanking the many people in attendance who helped with her campaign, and who have been supporters throughout her tenure in Rumford and as County Treasurer.

Oxford County Democratic Chair Cathy Newell of Greenwood thanked the many campaign volunteers in attendance for their effort on behalf of all the Democratic candidates. She thanked Arthur and Jean Muse, owners of the Hotel Harris, for making the facility available for the event, and Diane Ronan of the Island Indulgence Spa and the staff of The Boiler Room Restaurant for providing hospitality during the afternoon.

"This is truly a wonderful occasion," Newell stated. "The good will that is so evident this afternoon will provide a wonderful start for Sheriff Gallant, Chief Deputy Tripp, and Treasurer Prue, as well as Register of Deeds Jane Rich, who was prevented from attending due to the weather."

The ceremony and reception were sponsored by the Oxford County Democratic Committee.

Western Mountains Senior College

Western Mountains Senior Players are already looking ahead to their new winter/spring class, which meets weekly, beginning Thursday, Feb. 8, from 3 to 5 p.m.

The first class will be held at the Moses Mason House, with the following classes scheduled for Thursdays, from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Gehring House.

Lynn Arizzi, director, and the cast were delighted with the enthusiasm shown by the standing-room-only audiences at their spring and fall performances last year. To accommodate this growing interest, Lynn has scheduled two public performances for the week-end of April 15th.

Lynn says new members are welcome and encouraged to join this entertaining group. She promises a wide variety of literature and performance opportunities for Senior Players to discover their hidden talents. In addition to past performers who are anxious to start again, she has already heard from several more who wish to join the fun.

Lynn said the idea behind Senior Players is to have fun and exercise the "ham" in all of us. Experience is not necessary. She said amateur thespians just need a keen desire to challenge themselves in the art of theater.

Senior Players is a course offered by Western Mountains Senior College. Information about membership in WMSC, which is open to anyone over age 50, and the registration fee for joining Senior Players may be obtained by calling SAD44 Community Education at 824-2780. Anyone interested in learning more about the Senior Players may call Lynn at 824-0080.

"Songcatcher" an independent Sun Dance Festival film, will be shown in the Telstar Library, facilitated by Lynn Arizzi, on Sunday, Jan. 21, from 2 to 5 p.m.

A number of Western Mountains Senior College (WMSC) members have expressed an interest in independent films, and Lynn recommended this film because it offers a wonderful story about Appalachian music.

Lynn will share her love of music and the music of Appalachia in a sing-a-long before the film. She will also discuss Appalachian music to familiarize the audience with the music as it was performed in the film.

The film depicts a gifted musicologist, Dr. Lilly Penleric (Golden Globe Award winner, Janet McTeer) who visits her sister in the beautiful, rugged mountains of Appalachia. It is here she discovers a wellspring of emotional tunes passed down from the original Irish and Scottish immigrants who settled in these parts. Determined to document the history of the songs, she immerses herself in mountain life, falls in love with a local musician, and is profoundly changed by the generosity, strength and freedom of the fiercely proud mountain people. The film runs for one hour and 49 minutes.

The program will conclude with a discussion on various aspects of the film. WMSC members are welcome to bring a friend to enjoy the music. It is also suggested that they bring seat cushions for more comfortable seating.

SWOAM
The Western Maine Chapter of the Small Woodland Owners Association of Maine will host a panel discussion of outdoor wood-burning furnaces at 7 p.m. Jan. 18, at Oxford Hills Comprehensive High School.

Featured will be representatives from three major companies, two homeowners and a representative from the Department of Environmental Protection, which is in the process of establishing regulations for outdoor furnaces.

Louis Fontaine has worked for DEP for 28 years and has been manager of the compliance program for the department's Bureau of Air Quality since 1991. He oversees a staff of seven inspectors who ensure that regulated facilities comply with regulations and emission licenses as well as responding to complaints about air pollution problem.

Fontaine will open the program with a PowerPoint presentation. Following opening statements by other panel members, the session will be opened to questions.

The Bureau of Air Quality is examining a variety of options that would require cleaner and more efficient designs in the near future. Options under consideration include emission testing, emission limits and consumer labeling; setbacks from property lines or neighboring buildings; and restrictions on heating season use.

Joining the informational discussion will be Bruce Markham of Best-Way Wood

Heat, Inc. of Readfield. Bruce and Terry Markham have sold Heatmor Stainless Steel Outdoor Woodstoves since 1994. They have several hundred of the Minnesota-made stoves in operation in commercial and domestic uses.

Rick Thibodeau of Independent Power in Greene has been a dealer for Central Boiler of Greenbush, Minn., since 2000. A fully licensed master electrician with over 20 years' experience, he also holds a certificate in Photovoltaic Design and Installation from Solar Energy International.

Jeff Green of Peavey Manufacturing Co. of Eddington will represent the Taylor Waterstove made in North Carolina. Peavey Manufacturing Company, known throughout the world for logging tools, is celebrating 150 years in business and installed its first Taylor Waterstove 14 years ago to heat its dry kilns.

The meeting, open to anyone, will be held in the Oxford Hills Forum located just inside the school's front entrance across from Rite-Aid on Route 26. From the main parking lot, the entrance is located on the right side of the building.

its annual Beekeeping School starting Jan. 17, at Mountain Valley High School in Rumford. The classes last twelve weeks and are scheduled so that students will complete the series just in time to set up their hives.

The sessions are taught by area beekeepers, so the information is both practical and relevant to the climate in western Maine.

Class subjects include setting up hives, acquiring honeybees, harvesting honey, disease prevention and hive management for each season.

Students who set up hives have the support of club members as they gain hands-on experience with the bees.

Throughout the summer, club members hold "Open Hive" meetings to demonstrate the application of the information that was presented in class.

There are different "breeds" of bees, and local hobbyists urge new beekeepers to pick those that are known for their docile behavior. Proper handling of the honeybee colony will minimize the possibility of being stung, and new keepers are taught the proper techniques to use when working with their hives.

Registration will be held Wednesday, Jan. 17, at 6:30 p.m. at Mountain Valley High School in Rumford. The cost of the classes is $30 and includes books, handouts and one-year membership in the Western Maine Beekeepers' Association.

Anyone interested in learning more about the Bee School, or the club, can contact Carol Cottrell (364/0917 or WMBAm@msn.com) for information.

Bethel Rotary Club

The Bethel Rotary Club has completed a very busy month of holiday fundraisers and activities.

The Country Breakfast in late November kicked off the holiday season and drew more than 270 people.

It was followed the first weekend of December by the Christmas tree lighting on the common and the first of three weekends of bell-ringing at the Bethel Foodliner.

Collections from bell-ringing support the Christmas for Children fund, which provides gifts for needy children in the area.

The annual Santa Sunday at Sunday River Ski Resort provided its usual donation to the project. The club thanks Sunday River and all the "Santas" that participated.

Dec. 12 brought the annual Christmas Luncheon for Seniors at the Jackson-Silver Legion Post in Locke Mills, with entertainment provided by the Yet to be Named Banjo Band. About 180 attended.

And concluding the holiday projects was the annual Christmas Baskets distribution to children on Dec. 19.

Bob and Cynthia Laux returned in early December from their trip to Vietnam, where they participated in the dedication of a rural library for which Bob helped raise funds.

At a recent regular meeting of the club, Jonathon Parsons and Josie Reiss described their experience this past summer at Rotary Youth Leadership Awards (RYLA), held at Camp Hinds in Raymond.

They were among about 100 young people who camped for three nights in tents as part of the leadership experience.

They completed a survey that determined each participant's leadership style. Jonathon said, for example, that when placed in a leadership position, he typically draws on the opinions of others in the group before making a decision.

The RYLA participants took part in a variety of team-building activities that included a ropes course, balance exercise and a first aid challenge, in which they carried a person down a hiking trail on a stretcher.

The Rotary Club of Bethel is very active in local community service projects and in providing financial support for other area organizations.

We also support cultural exchanges with foreign countries for area students and adults. And as part of Rotary International projects, we provide funds for medical services for Polio Plus (polio immunization) and Rotoplast (surgery for children with cleft lip).

We are happy to have interested individuals join us for breakfast on Tuesday mornings. For more information contact Steve Wight at 824-2410.

Waterford Library

The next monthly Waterford Library book discussion will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 24, to discuss "Leap of Faith," by Queen Noor. All are welcome.

This moving memoir by Lisa Najeeb Halaby, the fourth wife of King Hussein of Jordan, provides a timely look at one woman's story against a backdrop of 30 turbulent years: the displacement of over one-million Palestinians by the creation of Israel, King Hussein's frustrated efforts for peace, and the effect of Saddam Hussein and the Gulf War on Jordan and the royal family. Queen Noor offers intimate new glimpses of King Hussein, Saddam Hussein, Queen Elizabeth, Arafat, and many other world leaders.

Knitting Group

The Waterford Library will be open regular hours, 2 to 6 p.m. on Martin Luther King Day, Jan. 15. An informal knitting group will be offered from 2 till 4 p.m. New and experienced knitters are invited to come and work on their projects in a companionable atmosphere. Assistance will be available from expert knitters. In case of inclement weather please call 583-4405 or the library at 527-2050 (after 2 p.m.) to check if the meeting is rescheduled.

The Waterford Library is open to all residents of Waterford. Hours are Monday 2 to 6 p.m., Wednesday 3 to 8 p.m., Friday 10 to 12 a.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

THE DOWN PAYMENT CONUNDRUM

Perhaps no single decision in a real estate purchase has more possible variables than "How much money should I put down?" If you provide a large down payment, you have lower monthly mortgage payments, little or no mortgage insurance, a good equity position, and perhaps a preferred mortgage deal. One disadvantage of a large down payment is that you will be using after-tax dollars on which you could be earning interest. You will also have less tax-deductible interest.

With a low down payment, you have the advantage of more tax-deductible interest, and your investment value percentage will increase faster. Contrary to the effects of a large down payment, you will have little equity at the outset, and your payments (and perhaps your interest) will be higher. You will also keep more of your own money in hand for future repairs, improvements, or to potentially earn more interest in other investments.

I will be happy to help you consider all these variables.

ELISABETH S. DEWING

Elisabeth S. Dewing, 90, of South Paris, died Friday, Jan. 5, 2007 at Stephens Memorial Hospital.

She was born in Philadelphia, Pa., on April 25, 1916, the daughter of Earle Covington Smith and Elisabeth Fulton Drummond Smith. She was raised in Philadelphia, educated at Friends Select School and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania as an English and French major.

Graduating from college with no marketable skills during the height of the depression made it difficult to obtain employment. That summer she earned money to attend business school by working as a waitress in Kearsarge, N.H.

During World War II, while working as a service representative in the business office for the phone company, she felt the need to help with the war effort as well as find a job that offered greater challenges. She enlisted in the newly formed Women's Army Corp (WAC). It was the start of a military career that took her all over the United States, France, Japan and to the Pentagon.

During the Korean conflict she served with General MacArthur at his headquarters in Tokyo. It was while stationed in Japan that she experienced her first earthquake. She rose to the rank of CWO W-4. The military offered her many opportunities to indulge in her love of travel.

It was while on leave, during a cruise of the Greek Islands, that she met her future husband, Dr. Stephen Dewing.

Bess retired from the Army in 1965, and married Stephen Dewing. They moved to Waterford in 1969, when Steve took the position of the first full-time radiologist at Stephens Memorial Hospital. She and Steve continued to indulge in the mutual love of travel and eventually they visited all five continents.

Retirement and marriage gave her the opportunity to develop her cooking skills. A meal at her table was a culinary delight. All who had the opportunity to share them with her fondly remember her Christmas dinners and superb apple pies.

She was a member of the Christ Episcopal Church in Norway. Many thanks are to be given to her fellow church members, her many friends, the staff of Androscooggin Home Care and Hospice, and especially the staff at Stephens Memorial Hospital who made her final days comfortable and full of grace.

She is survived by her stepson and daughter-in-law, Andrew and Nancy Dewing of Greenwood; stepgrandson, Ian Dewing; two great-granddaughters of Albuquerque, N.M.; as well as many cousins from Arizona to New Jersey.

A memorial service will be held on Saturday, Jan. 13, at 11 a.m. at the Christ Episcopal Church in Norway. Interment will be at Elm Vale Cemetery in South Waterford. Remembrance donations can be made to Christ Episcopal Church, 35 Paris Street, Norway, ME 04268, or the "Friends of the Shakers," Sabbathday Lake Shakers, Trust for Public Land Project, 707 Shaker Road, New Gloucester, ME 04260. Online condolences may be shared with her family at www.westonchandler.com.

Card of Thanks

There is no way that I can thank everyone individually who has helped me since I broke my shoulder, therefore it seems that this is the best way.

I thank the visitors, the phone calls, the people who brought meals (and goodies) to me, all my neighbors at Sudbury Village, and those who stepped in and took me to the doctors. Also, our super great ambulance people, the doctors and nurses at Stephens Memorial Hospital, and my brothers and sisters at church who prayed for me. Also, my gals who have made living home-bound easier.

God Bless All of You,
Ginny Walker
